Overview

When will Bogota's first metro line be built?

As of mid-2025, Bogotá's first metro line is over halfway complete. The system is scheduled to begin operational testing in 2027, with full commercial service launching in Q2 of 2028. 3. What type of metro system is being built?

Bogotá is constructing an elevated metro system (viaduct) for its first line.

Is the Bogota Metro Line 1 being built in China?

According to governmental sources, the train is still under construction in China and will soon be embarked on its way to Bogota. According to WSP, the lead civil and system designer for Bogotá's Metro Line 1, the infrastructure will accommodate 72,000 passengers per hour in each direction, totaling 1.05 million daily.

Why is Bogota constructing a metro line?

Bogotá is constructing an elevated metro system (viaduct) for its first line. This method was chosen because it is faster and more cost-effective than underground alternatives, though it has drawn criticism for potentially worsening surface-level congestion in dense neighborhoods. 4. How long is Line 1 of the Bogotá Metro?

Does Bogota have a metro system?

In the Western Hemisphere, few urban projects have been as eagerly awaited, as long delayed, and as politically charged as Bogotá's metro system. With a population exceeding 8 million in the city proper and a sprawling metropolitan footprint, Colombia's capital stands alone as the largest city in the Americas without a metro system.
